

This is the pats This is a test. This is attached

Hello.

It's June 9, 2010. Can you hear me?

I think everybody who's here has been here
before.

Has everyone here
been here before?

Has everyone been here before?

Yes, I have been here
before.

Tonight we're going to practice embedded questions.

What time is it? Okay
you can answer with the time. Or, if you don't know what the time is, you can say...

A: What time is it?

B: I don't know what time it is.

A: What did you have

for dinner last night?

B: I can't remember
what I had.

A: Do you remember
what you did last week?

B: I can't remember
what I did last week.

A: What's the temperature outside

right now?

B: I'm not sure what the temperature is right now.

Didi you look at the lessons for today and yesterday?

It's important to look at the blog every day.

The blog matches the daily lessons on the home page.

The blog is like the daily classroom. If you follow the blog every day, it is similar to going to a classroom.

Do you get that impression?

The impression is the idea you have about the blog?

My blog is updated daily and it's similar to the classroom.

Are you following the lessons in the orange level?

Yes, I am.

Do you understand the lessons in the orange level?

Yes, I do.

You should visit other websites while you are on my website.

what is the present

tense in English?

Pronunciation is important.

Test. Sorry.

My windows were out
of order on the screen.

I'm trying to learn how to do many things at one time.

What questions do you have about English?

Yes, Bruno. You may ask a question.

We ate beans and rice
for dinner.

We ate beans with rice
for dinner.

Past perfect:

had + past participle

She had lived in California for 12 years
before she moved to New York.

She lived in California
for 12 years before she moved to New York.

I hurt myself.

I cut myself.

I burned myself.

She is sitting by herself. (She is alone)

This night we are going to have a great time!

What do you want to do tonight?

this night = a very special occasion

I wonder why it's so difficult to learn English.

A: What do you want to do today?

B: Perhaps we could go to the beach.

B: Maybe we could go to the beach.

A: Is this a good idea?

B: Perhaps. (I'm not sure)

B: Maybe. (I don't know / I'm not sure)

She'll probably be here in ten minutes.

A: Do you think she'll be here in ten minutes?

B: Probably. (this is stronger)

B: Maybe.

Are there any videos that you would like me to work on on YouTube?

Almost all of my
students call me
"teacher. "

I prefer "Paul."

I always tell my
students call me Paul,
but most of them call
me "teacher."

Teachers use their last name in the United States in elementary and secondary schools.

But they often don't use their last names when teaching adults.

I called many of my professors by their first name if they were younger, but if they were older I called them "Dr.

_____." (and then their last name)

The class where I teach is very informal.

I teach in an informal classroom setting.

I'm going back and forth between my voice and typing by hand.